“They Call Me Dad” Conference Set for June 6

Hey, Dad! June is the month we celebrate you and all you do for us. If you are lucky enough to be called “Dad,” we have something especially for you!

“They Call Me Dad” is a conference just for fathers on Saturday, June 6, from 9:00 to 11:30 a.m. at Chemeketa Community College.

Join us as we explore why dads matter in the development of their children and discover resources that dads can use to enhance their role in the family.

Have breakfast and meet former Portland Trail Blazer center, Chris Dudley. Chris is a dad and will talk about his unique perspective on the importance of men in his life. He will also be available for autographs before the conference.

We’ll also hear from Johnny Lake, who is an internationally recognized speaker and trainer. Johnny will be talking about the importance of dads to a family.

Register now for this important half-day conference and find out more about the assets that dads bring to the family table. It’s a very good way to spend a Saturday morning. You’ll never regret it!

To register or for more information, call Elena at (503) 385-4675. The conference costs $5.00 and scholarships are available.

This conference is sponsored by the Willamette Education Service District, Salem Hospital, Spirit Mountain Community Fund, the Marion County Children and Families Commission and the Marion County Sheriff’s Office.
