Through Sickness & Health

As the weather cools down, the chances of food workers becoming sick can increase. Besides the common cold and flu, there are food-related illnesses that are more likely to spread during the fall and winter seasons. As an operator, it's important to have a plan in place to keep your staff and customers healthy.

Here are some key things to think about:

1) Have an Illness Policy

Having an illness policy is very important. This is a set of rules that explains what employees should do if they're feeling sick. The policy should include:

Vomiting

Diarrhea

Sore throat
with fever

Jaundice
(yellowing of eyes
and skin)

Infected wounds or lesions with pus
(on hands, wrists, or exposed body parts)

When to stay home

Food workers should stay home if they have symptoms like vomiting, diarrhea, jaundice, sore throat with fever, or exposed infected wounds.

These symptoms can spread illness to others and make food unsafe to serve.

How to report

Food workers must contact their supervisor as soon as they feel sick. Reporting their illness is mandatory

When to return

Food workers must wait at least 24 hours after symptoms have stopped before returning to work.

By having a clear policy, everyone knows what to expect, and you'll be ready when illness strikes.

2) Communicate the Illness Policy

Make sure all food workers know and understand the illness policy. Here's how you can do that:

Discuss it during training

Review the policy during new employee training and remind your team about the policy during team meetings

Post it in a visible place

Post the policy in an area where all staff can see it. Examples include:

- Breakrooms
- Near the handwashing sink
- Near the employee schedule
- On the bulletin board

Be open to questions

If an employee is unsure about what to do when they feel sick, be available to help.

Clear communication is key! If your team knows what's expected, they will feel comfortable following the policy.

3) Ensure the Policy is Being Followed

A well thought-out illness policy is pointless if no one is following it. Monitor food workers while in the kitchen and take action when needed

Watch for these signs of illness

- Excessive trips to the bathroom (indicating vomiting or diarrhea);
- Yellowing of the skin, eyes, and fingernails (indicating jaundice);
- Cold sweats or chills (indicating fever);
- Persistent nasal discharge and sneezing (although common symptoms for allergies, this could also spread germs to exposed food and utensils/equipment).

Send ill workers home

Don't allow sick workers to remain in the kitchen.

Don't force staff that are sick with vomiting or diarrhea to come to work.

It's not worth the risk!

Allow ill workers to return when safe

Remember to follow the 24-Hours Symptom-Free requirement.

EXAMPLE: An employee reports that they were vomiting last night but feels better this morning. They cannot work that same day (morning or afternoon shifts). They may return to work the next day, as long as they feel well.

Stay Safe & Healthy

With a solid illness policy and good communication, you can help protect your employees, your customers, and your business.

2026 Renewal Notices

Renewal invoices for 2026 will be mailed and/or emailed between late-October and early-November.

There are some changes to food service fees that will begin in 2026. We understand that times are tough for many people, especially when the cost of everything is going up. However, these changes are needed to help cover the costs of services provided by our office.

Annual Fee Increases

As in past years, license fees will increase by 4% during this renewal period. This regular adjustment helps keep up with rising costs.

New Fees

There will be a few new fees starting in 2026:

- INSPECTION FEE FOR BENEVOLENT ORGANIZATIONS

- Nonprofit organizations that provide food to people in need will now have to pay a small inspection fee. Please note that if your organization provides catering or food for the general public, then you must apply for a restaurant license and pay standard license fee.

- Nonprofit Inspection Fee = $150

- ON-SITE CONSULTATION FEE

- If an operator would like an in-person visit of their facility to discuss possible problems, review equipment layout, verify tank/sink dimensions, or other advice, they may request an on-site consultation inspection.

- 1st hour fee = $179

- Additional fee per 15 minutes = $45

- EXPEDITED PLAN REVIEW FEE

- Operators that wish to have their plans reviewed quickly (within two business days) can now request for their application to be expedited.

- Expedite Fee = additional $500

- TEMPORARY RESTAURANT FEE CHANGES

- Temporary restaurant applications must now be received at least a week (7-days) before the event to qualify for a discount rate.
- Applications received less than 7 days before the event will not qualify for the discount and must pay the standard fee.
